INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquérir les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back. Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

This document looks at the way Canada responded to the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. In particular, it is about the failure of the Canadian political system to exercise effective control of the Canadian military in an international crisis. It also discusses how the Minister of National Defence, Douglas Harkness, and his military commanders had to take matters into their own hands to avert a national embarrassment. It contains a chronology of the events of the crisis as well as documents related to the episode.

This report uses tables and charts prepared from data from the Ontario component of the 1990 survey of recreational fishing in Canada, a nationally co-ordinated study conducted at five-year intervals in all provinces and territories. The results presented in the report reflect data specifically defined for the Great Lakes Fishery. Anglers were asked to provide the name of the lake, river, or stream on which they fished, the nearest town or village, the number of days fished, the number of fish caught and kept by species, and other attitudinal and socio-economic information regarding their fishing activities. Estimates for Great Lakes waters were produced using geographic coding to identify each town, grouped according to their proximity to Great Lakes waters. The survey provides information on effort and numbers of anglers, expenditures, major purchases and investments including package deals, willingness to pay, and attitudes.

As part of the 1991 international piping plover census, 11 sites in Newfoundland and four sites in St.-Pierre-et-Miquelon were surveyed in June and July. The Newfoundland census was conducted in areas that had previously been used by nesting plovers as well as in potential nesting areas that contained suitable habitat. A second survey of Big Barasway was conducted in July 1991. The St.-Pierre-et-Miquelon survey was conducted at sites that were used in the past by plovers. Notes were kept on human disturbance such as the presence of roads, off-road vehicles, and people and dog tracks. Natural disturbances such as heavy ice conditions and the presence of predators were also recorded.

Electron acceleration by relativistic large-amplitude plasma waves is studied by theory and particle simulations. The maximum acceleration that can be obtained from this process depends on many factors. ### Accountability and educational philosophy : paradigms and conflict in Ontario education : a 1989 update

By D. Raphael. Toronto : The Author, 1989. 27 p. : Bibl. ONTERIS ON05333 MICROLOG 94-05436 (1 fiche)

Argues for a shift from the organismic (child-centred) approach to education to a modified mechanistic model. The organismic model is criticized for the way it overcomplicates and mystifies what occurs in education and teaching. It also limits public disclosure concerning levels of student achievement, which in turn stifles calls for public accountability reports by the education system. As well, it suggests that the organismic model perpetuates class-related high drop-out rates. The modified mechanistic model places the teacher at the centre of education. Dynamic interactionism is one way to move beyond strict mechanistic tenets, which has, as its strengths, instruction and assessment. Conclusions are, that since the organismic approach limits enthusiasm and assessment (yet assessment has an important role to play in improving education), an alternative to the prevailing organismic approach is necessary.

Cependant, la violence est toujours présente et l'Afrique du Sud ne fait qu'entrer dans ce qui sera fort probablement la période la plus difficile de son histoire. Dans ce bulletin, nous donnons un aperçu du processus constitutionnel qui mènera aux premières élections véritablement démocratiques, prévues pour le 27 avril 1994.

This report develops, tests, and assesses a method to integrate and summarize agricultural production data with biophysical landscape units. The method uses the 1986 census data for the County of Stettler, Alberta by farm headquarters to provide more accurate summaries of agricultural production for landscape units of a municipality. Agricultural production data for the 23 land systems is integrated by linking farm headquarters records and associated production data to a land system; describing the land resource characteristics of the land systems; summarizing agricultural production by land system; and grouping the land systems into five broad groups for comparative analyses.

Findings suggested the importance of motivational factors and indicated less evidence in support of the impact of institutional factors.

These scenarios include exposure of a member of the drilling crew, of a technologist conducting a core examination, of a construction worker, and of a resident. The consequences of each scenario was estimated using standard computer codes for environmental pathways analysis and radiation dosimetry. An event-tree methodology was used to estimate the probability of each scenario. For each scenario, a sequence of events or failures that could lead to the exposure of the intruder was defined, with time-dependent probabilities assigned to each event or failure, based on the judgements of experts and specialists in relevant technologies and social sciences.

The Nuclear Fuel Waste Management Program has as one of its objectives to assess the movement of nuclides using modelling techniques to calculate the radiological dose to humans and concentrations of contaminants in the environment. To achieve these goals, a biosphere model, comprising four submodels, was developed. This report describes the atmosphere submodel and the pathways through which nuclides may move through the atmosphere. The model describes the processes of nuclide suspension, dispersion, and deposition. Surface water and soil are considered as primary sources of nuclide fluxes to the atmosphere. The model considers natural phenomena such as wind erosion of soil, forest fires, gaseous emissions from soil, and bubble bursting at lake surfaces. Anthropogenic processes, such as wood burning for energy, are also modelled, and nuclide concentrations in both outdoor and indoor air are calculated. The model combines a variety of techniques, including mass loading concepts, flux density estimates, numerical dispersion models, and specific-activity relationships. The model is probabilistic, with transport modelled using simple mass transfer equations and variability incorporated by distributing values for parameters. This report documents the model equations, the parameter values, and comparisons of pathways. CA DE EV PS SC

Protection of the environment is a key issue in the disposal of long-lived radioactive wastes. To assess the implications of underground disposal, transport models are used to predict radionuclide concentrations in soil and water. This report suggests baseline environmental concentrations of the most important radionuclides in nuclear fuel waste. It summarizes background concentrations of the nuclides in soil and surface water, and suggests environmental increments that could be added to soil and water without causing detectable effects. When available, the report also includes data on concentrations that have been measured in the environment without causing an observable effect. CA DE EV PS SC

Le bassin de desserte d'un établissement hospitalier est le résultat de l'application d'un modèle descriptif qui permet de définir et d'analyser la clientèle de cet établissement en rapport avec la population qu'il doit desservir et dont il est en quelque sorte responsable. Ce document est basé essentiellement sur l'analyse des données d'hospitalisation et s'adresse principalement au programme de santé physique. Il tente d'identifier globalement quelles proportions de la population de chaque territoire considéré sont desservies par chaque établissement, i.e. leur bassin de desserte. L'approche utilisée permet, en quelque sorte, de positionner les populations locales, les unes par rapport aux autres, en ce qui concerne la consommation de services ou de soins de santé de courte durée en milieu hospitalier.

An ecological and land use inventory and analysis of Nose Hill Park was conducted from May to December 1993 to form an information foundation for final site selection and alignments of physical developments and to provide an objective basis for the development of a natural area management plan. The study addressed both the biological and physical resources and processes in the study area. Integrated ecological units that supported landform, soils, vegetation, and wildlife inventory and evaluation were mapped and an inventory and assessment of geological, hydrological, archaeological, and land use parameters was conducted. Field studies were conducted from June to October 1993 to map ecological units and collect soils, vegetation, and wildlife habitat information at 100 sampling plots. Trail condition and use data were collected from late July to late September 1993. Analysis of biophysical inventory information consisted of an evaluation of resource significance, summary and analysis of land uses and levels, assessment of land use suitability, and assessment of the degree of threat to significant biophysical and cultural resources.

Report of a study of the phenomenon of bullying among elementary school children. Contains a review of the literature, an exploration of what school children of different ages know and understand about bullying, and questionnaire data on the incidence, correlates and frequency of bullying in a sample of Toronto elementary schools. Also describes a number of successful interventions which have been shown to greatly reduce the incidence of bullying. The literature review found that the phenomenon is widespread, the incidence varies by culture and nationality, and intervention is a real possibility. The Toronto survey found that boys were more involved than girls, young children were more victimized than older ones, many teachers and parents were unaware of individual children's involvement, and children perceived that teachers frequently overlooked bullying. One student in 3 suffered from bullying at some point, and 1 in 12 suffered from bullying very frequently. These numbers are much higher than in Scandinavia and similar to those reported in Britain.

Wildlife habitat suitability was assessed for 10 wildlife evaluation species. Assessments were conducted using the 1:5,000 biophysical base mapping completed for each focus area. Biophysical base maps were prepared for each focus area by dividing and classifying the land surface into ecological units or ecotones based on recurring patterns of landform, soil, and vegetation. A habitat suitability index was calculated for each focus area ecotone and the calculated value was multiplied by the area of the ecotone. The resulting value provides a measure of total habitat supply or habitat units and thus a baseline assessment of available habitat.

The section affirms that everyone has the following freedoms: conscience and religion, thought, belief, opinion, and expression, which is stated to include freedom of the press and other media of communication. Also grouped under this heading are the freedoms of peaceful assembly and association. There can be little dispute that the denial of one or more of these freedoms would have a profound effect on everyone in Canada.

Exploration of the use of cohort household headship (or householder) rates for projecting household headship rates to the year 2011. It reports on two separate experiments with the parameterization of such cohort rates. The first experiment used data on male and female headship rates from seven successive Canadian censuses (1956-86) organized in five-year terms to fit an appropriate curve to the rates of older cohorts, examine trends in parameters, and then use the same functional form to extrapolate to the unknown future behaviour of younger members. The second experiment modelled each cohort with the best-fitting curve out of a large set of curves available in TABLECURVE, an automated curve-fitting package.

The data used are the non-family headship rates in the CMHC series from censuses 1971-86.

Le harcèlement sexuel n'a rien d'une plaisanterie. Il bouleverse la vie de la victime, met en péril son gagne-pain, nuit à la carrière du harceleur et corrompt l'atmosphère au travail. Bref, en milieu de travail, le prix à payer aux plans émotif et financier est souvent énorme pour tous. Ce document se penche sur la question en examinant les points suivants : l'étendue du problème - des tribunaux aux salles de classe, aux chantiers de construction, les droits et obligations légales, et les perspectives et initiatives des employeurs et des syndicats.

Salmonella contamination of chicken is a major public health concern with modern, concentrated production methods increasing the difficulty of control. The current and suggested treatments with chlorinated water or heat pasteurization are unsatisfactory. This review of the technical status of irradiation of chicken used a wide spectrum of relevant literature, including that on sources of Salmonella and methods for the control of Salmonella and other pathogens. The report does not address the question of distribution of Salmonella in chicken nor does it address the basic aspects of radiolysis and chemical aspects pertaining to food irradiation. The report covers the sources of Salmonella infection; its control in poultry and poultry products; other food-borne pathogens; shelf-life extension of chicken carcass and meat by radurization; radaperization; and a comparison of electron and gamma radiation.

Determinants and predictors of household headship : model specification

By A. Skaburskis and T.K. Burch. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Research Division, 1992. 35 p. MICROLOG 94-05404 (1 fiche)

Description of the statistical models to be used to estimate the effect of economic and demographic factors on headship rates. It uses an analysis of the census public use micro data on individuals and justifies the use of this data set as the primary data source. Supplementary analyses of the 1985 general social survey are also discussed in connection with the role of variables not contained in the census PUS tapes. The model describes the behaviour of individuals and estimates the contribution of changes in relevant factors to a person's propensity to head his or her own household, whether living alone or with others. The analysis aims to develop a set of binary choice models that will help predict age specific headship rates for use in the CMHC potential housing requirement forecasting model. The analysis considers separately young people forming new households, middle-aged people who move in and out of family status, and the elderly who try to maintain independent living options. MAPLE-MTR is a new multipurpose research facility being planned as a possible replacement for the 35-year-old NRU reactor. In developing the MAPLE-MTR concept, AECL is starting from the recent design and licensing experience with the MAPLE-X10 reactor. By starting from technology developed to support the MAPLE-X10 design and adapting it to produce a concept that satisfies the requirements of fuel channel materials testing and fuel irradiation programs, AECL expects to minimize the need for major advances in nuclear technology. Formulation of the MAPLE-MTR concept is at an early stage. ## The Development of first and second language reading skills in early French immersion

By E. Geva and S. Clifton. Scarborough, ON : The Authors, 1992. 32 p. ONTERIS ON06081 MICROLOG 94-05443 (1 fiche)

Compared good and poor readers in the early French Immersion program to good and poor readers in the regular English stream on various indices of accuracy and speed, and examined the emergence of accuracy and fluency in reading of good and poor readers in the French Immersion program who spoke English as a first and as a second language. On measures of speed and fluency, there was a clear advantage to children in the English stream, but on accuracy-based measures, language groups did not differ significantly from each other. Concludes that normal transition from learning to read accurately to reading fluently occurs more slowly in French immersion students than it does when children learn to read in their first language. Results were discussed in terms of developmental transitions in second language reading and implications for program goals and student needs. ED ON OR SS

The five informal units are correlated with the subsurface map units of the Wabamun Group. To determine the relative age of each unit, 85 samples were collected at 10 m intervals. The conodonts recovered from the samples are compared with the diagnostic conodonts of the Late Devonian Standard Conodont Zonation. AL CA ND NR SC

The Disposal of Canada's nuclear fuel waste : the biosphere model, BIOTRAC, for postclosure assessment

The nuclear fuel waste management concept of Canada calls for disposal of the waste in a vault mined deep in plutonic rock of the Canadian Shield. The technical feasibility of this concept, and its impact on the environment and human health, will be documented in an environmental impact statement (EIS) by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. This report is one of nine EIS primary references. It describes the BIOTRAC model, used to trace nuclide movement from the geosphere through the biosphere and to calculate time-dependent environmental concentrations and radiological doses to humans and other biota for the postclosure phase. The reliability of BIOTRAC is discussed in terms of experimental validation, model and data evaluation, peer review, model intercomparisons, conservative assumptions, quality assurance procedures, and natural analogs. A sensitivity analysis of the model is used to identify the nuclides, pathways, and parameters that are important in determining radiological doses, and to show that the model is performing as expected on a intuitive basis. The changes required to apply the model to a specific site during siting of a disposal facility are identified and shown to be achievable.

A waste repository for the belowground disposal of low-level radioactive waste, called Intrusion Resistant Underground Structure (IRUS), is planned at Chalk River Laboratories. Since the rate of degradation depends to a major extent on the rate of ingress of aggressive ions into concrete, laboratory testing is in progress to establish the diffusion rates of chlorides and sulphate ions. A total of 1000 concrete specimens and 500 paste specimens are being exposed at 22C and 45C to 25 different combinations of corrosive agents, including carbon dioxide. Procedures to measure the ionic penetration profile and to determine the factors controlling diffusion of ions in the various concretes were developed. This paper presents the initial results from the program and the longevity predictions to qualify concretes for the waste repository, based on 16 months of diffusion testing on laboratory specimens.

As part of the study, 11 air-attack officers in Alberta with experience using FLIRs were asked to estimate the savings to be realized in retardant costs, flying costs, and area burned by employing this technology. Where possible, these predictions are compared with dissolution rates measured chemically and available in the literature.

As a result of the model, it should be possible to design a prototype that could carry out queries on ELIAS, DRAMS, EnviroSource, and EAPR. The desire to be spared from prolonged suffering, the increased incidence of incurable diseases such as AIDS and Alzheimer's Disease, and a better understanding of how medical technology can prolong life and affect the dying process, among other things, have fuelled the desire to achieve greater control over decisions relating to life and death. These factors have also fostered a renewed interest in euthanasia and cessation of medical treatment. Absences from class were seen to be a problem and most felt that it was harder to catch up on missed work. Students were divided as to whether they did more in-depth work. Overall positive results supported the continuing of the program, with some areas identified for improvement in organization or professional development.

Exterior insulation and finish systems (EIFS) are composite cladding systems of plastic foam insulation attached to the exterior of a building, finished with thin glass reinforced synthetic stucco. This study evaluated 25 different installations in the Vancouver, Rocky Mountain, Calgary, Edmonton, and Toronto regions. The EIFS applications had been in service from 2-13 years and most were of the soft coat type, with thin, relatively flexible acrylic polymer stucco over polystyrene insulation. Retrofit installations on older buildings, and buildings originally incorporating the finish were both included. Each installation was visually examined for signs of distress and deterioration. Building owners, occupants, and managers were interviewed, and the working drawings were examined in most cases. When it was possible the interior was examined for signs of damage if there appeared to be problems on the exterior. In 10 cases, representative samples of the insulation and finish were taken for laboratory analysis to determine lamina weight, thickness of finish and base coats, water absorption, polymer type and amount, and reinforcement. Visible anomalies were reported.

One of the risks associated with this system is the instability and vulnerability of released white spruce to wind damage. To reduce the risks of wind damage in the current and new silvicultural systems applied to the Boreal forest, wind risk assessment and classification systems must be developed. This report presents an analysis and summary of high wind speeds in Alberta, using calculated return periods of high wind speeds that represent the average length of time between gusts of given wind speeds. In addition, the directional history of maximum recorded gusts was examined.

Un certain nombre de lois et de politiques ont amélioré la condition des femmes du Canada. Mais il reste encore beaucoup à faire avant que ces dernières jouissent des mêmes droits et privilèges que les hommes. Il semble bien,

The study includes the results of a literature review, a strategy development that considers the factors involved in fishery development, and a development strategy that suggests the rationale for fishery development and makes specific recommendations.

Fission-gas release in fuel performing to extended burnups in Ontario Hydro nuclear generating stations

The average discharge burnup of CANDU fuels is about 200 MWh/kgU but a significant number of 37-element bundles have achieved burnups of over 400 MWh/kgU, although some of them have experienced failures related to their extended operation. This paper describes examinations conducted on the extended-burnup fuel, including their power histories, the results of fission-gas releases, sheath oxidation and CANLUB coating behaviour, grain growth, and pellet-clad interaction.

One of the aims when managing a reactor accident is to minimize the release of radioactive fission products from the fuel, both into the containment and ultimately to the environment. It has frequently been assumed that the major factor controlling fission-product release kinetics is the temperature and thus the first remedial reaction is to bring the reactor temperature down. This may not necessarily be the best strategy. Consideration must also be given to how the temperature is reduced, as is shown by examples taken from the Three Mile Island and Chernobyl accidents.

Time-resolved fluorescence spectroscopy is an analytical technique capable of detecting fluorescent materials and elucidating their molecular environments. Some practical applications in the health and environmental protection fields include carcinogen monitoring, detecting and characterizing chemical contamination on surfaces, determining breakdown products in fluids under stress, bioassay of radionuclides and other toxic metals, and species migration in hydrogeology. This report concentrates on a biological application of Fluorescence Lifetime Analysis (FLA) in the study of DNA conformation. The report introduces the process of FLA, outlines the operation of the fluorescence lifetime instrument, describes the selection of an appropriate fluorescence decay curve to give maximum resolution of the decay components, demonstrates the limitations in the analysis procedure by showing the variation in the resultant lifetime values possible under different analysis conditions, and discusses the application of FLA to in vitro studies.

La RT est en fait une méta-heuristique qui combine une procédure de recherche locale avec un certain nombre de règles et de mécanismes permettant à celle-ci de surmonter l'obstacle des optima locaux tout en évitant de cycloper. Dans le cadre de cet article, nous présentons une description des principes de la méthode et de ses diverses composantes. Étant donné les différentes phases d'évolution du rôle défensif de l'île aux Noix, nous avons adopté, d'une façon générale, une division chronologique pour l'ordonnance des chapitres. Ainsi, les trois premiers recourent grosso modo les principaux conflits au cours desquels l'île aux Noix a joué un rôle prépondérant : la guerre de Conquête, la guerre d'indépendance américaine et la guerre de 1812-1814. Les trois chapitres suivants concernent plus particulièrement le fort Lennox, lequel constitue en quelque sorte l'aboutissement des installations défensives de l'île. Après une évaluation de la situation défensive qui amène la construction du fort, un chapitre complet est voué à l'analyse technique détaillée de celui-ci. On s'attarde alors sur l'évaluation technique de la fortification, et les implications sur le rôle défensif font l'objet d'une attention particulière. Le chapitre six analyse les dernières considérations sur l'objectif défensif de l'île aux Noix et les modifications qu'elles ont suscitées.

Given the various phases in the development of Ile aux Noix's defensive role, this document has adopted a chronological division for the order of chapters. Thus, roughly speaking, the first three coincide with the main conflicts in which Ile aux Noix played a preponderant role: the Seven Years' War, the American War of Independence and the War of 1812. The three following chapters are more particularly concerned with Fort Lennox, which in a way was the end point of the island's defensive installations. After an assessment of the defensive situation which led to the construction of the fort, a complete chapter is devoted to its detailed technical analysis. Thus, space is given to the technical assessment of the fortification, and the implications for its defensive role are given particular attention. Chapter six analyses the last occasions on which thought was given to Ile aux Noix's defensive purpose and the modifications that this thinking produced.

Argued that the language-experience approach to learning to read would result in more perceptual learning than traditional text approaches. This effect was called the "generation effect" after Slamenka and Graf (1978), who showed that adults performed significantly better on recognition and recall memory tests involving subject-generated words as opposed to experimenter-generated words. Results suggested that the language-experience approach should involve the presentation of new words independent of context at some point during training if the perceptual advantage of the generation effect is to be achieved.

Predictably, we have seen major reversals in the position of provincial governments that had committed themselves to harmonization. In this climate, the provinces that are not on side will continue to oppose harmonization vigorously for quite some time.

Identification and evaluation of aspen decay and stain in CTMP pulping

Decayed wood contains highly coloured materials derived from fungal metabolism that are hard to remove or to bleach. Aspen tends to develop decay at a very early age, particularly the heartwood. If the extended use of the Populus species present in Alberta for mechanical pulps is desirable, research is needed to determine the chemical characteristics of these coloured compounds and find means to negate their effects on the final pulp brightness. This project provided information on the effects of decay and stain on yield, optical, and strength properties of mechanical pulps produced from aspen wood decayed by the fungi 'Phellinus tremulae' and 'Peniophora polygonia'. Chips contained from 40-90% decay by volume. The resulting RMP pulps were brightened with 1%, 3%, 5%, and 7% H2O2 and the strength of the 7% H2O2-treated pulps were determined.

This report discusses the development of image-analysis techniques as one method of determining how localized corrosion processes propagate. The report outlines the fundamental principles of image analysis and describes the procedures developed for determining the distribution of corrosion sites on a corroded surface of a defined area and the geometric profile of penetration into the corroded specimen. The procedures were refined during the study of crevice corrosion on Grade-2 titanium, chosen because of its relevance to the Canadian Nuclear Fuel Waste Management Program. Some results of the crevice corrosion of the titanium in hot saline solutions are discussed.

Evaluated the impact of the bilingual exchange program sponsored by the Secretary of State, focusing on 3 months spent in Quebec by Anglophone participants from 3 provinces. Addressed what gains in French language proficiency were made by participants; the learning curve over the course of the exchange; the profile of participants' French use in Quebec; approaches adopted by students in coping with everyday life in Quebec; evidence of increased sociocultural awareness; and the contribution made by diaries kept by students. Overall conclusions did not support shortening the length of the exchange and pointed to linguistic gains for all groups, which were confirmed in the diaries. There was also indication of increased sociocultural awareness and much evidence of overall satisfaction with the experience.

As the nucleus of an integrated approach to information holdings management within Environment Canada, Envirosource also has the potential to serve as the basis for meeting various external reporting requirements on its information holdings. One key set of such requirements are those arising from the Access to Information Act and the Privacy Act (ATIP), for which an annual publication called Info Source is prepared. It is now time to investigate the required base ATIP information. This study reviewed and analyzed current TBS requirements and procedures for the annual Info Source and particularly Info Source elements that lend themselves to the database approach of Envirosource, particularly program records, standard program records, personal information banks, classes of personal information, and manuals; and integrated lessons learned from the sections on ATIP in the information holdings component of Envirosource Ver. 1.0.

The SEL FOG, model PMIDE, originally designed for a specific military market of 10-100 deg/hr drift range with input rates up to 1000 deg/sec, was loaned for laboratory evaluation. Target applications include use in an attitude and heading reference system (AHRS) or integrated into a tightly coupled GPS/INS navigation system. A complete series of laboratory tests were carried out on a Contraves two-axis motion table, including bias drift (magnitude, stability, repeatability, and temperature sensitivity) and scale factor (linearity, stability, repeatability, and temperature sensitivity) over a rate range of plus or minus 400 deg/sec. Turn-on and thermal transient tests were also conducted. A total of 480 hours of test data was accumulated and analyzed.

Because of the lack of data for the localized corrosion behaviour of these passive alloys under conditions that may be experienced in a disposal vault, this project was undertaken to study the crevice and pitting corrosion of the alloys in chloride solutions at elevated temperatures. Electrochemical and immersion tests were conducted in neutral sodium chloride solutions (0.1 wt% to saturated) at 25-200°C to identify the conditions under which localized corrosion occurs and to relate the actual corrosion behaviour to that expected on the basis of electrochemical studies.

This document presents information on the demographic characteristics and criminal history of Lower Mainland gang members and associates. It also looks at the following responses to the Lower Mainland gang problem: Coordinated Law Enforcement Unit initiatives, law enforcement initiatives, other government initiatives, and community initiatives.

Description of the mathematical formalism for calculating the rate of mass transport across interfaces in a multilayered medium for radionuclides in a decay chain. Two numerical algorithms were developed, both based on Laplace transport techniques, the first a direct solution for concentrations and fluxes in a two-layer medium, and the second an approximate solution based on a response function for mass transport across a finite layer adjacent to a semi-finite layer. A comparison of the two algorithms is presented. Results of sample calculations for a multilayered medium are also reported and compared with results based on the mass-transfer coefficient approximation.

To examine the disposal of nuclear fuel waste in a vault in plutonic rock, models (MCDIRC and MCROC) were developed to predict the mechanical behaviour of the rock in response to excavation and heat from the waste. MCDIRC estimates the resulting creep strain through an axisymmetrical cavity (a circular vertical shaft) in rock that is homogeneous and intact. This report describes the MCCREEP model, developed from MCDIRC to accommodate most cavity shapes, most stress states, and initial rock properties that may vary either with time and/or position. MCCREEP can accept the output from MCROC, a model developed to estimate changes in the elastic modulus of rock related to time-dependent microcracking caused by heat.

Description of a multi-category particle-in-cell sea ice model developed to improve the accuracy of operational ice edge forecasts by reducing the diffusion inherent in conventional models. This is achieved by Lagrangian treatment of ice area and volume conservation equations in which particles, each representing a collection of ice floes or a region of ice-covered area, are advected individually. The velocity field used in the advection is obtained by solving the sea ice momentum equation on a fixed Eulerian grid. The volume of ice requested by each particle is distributed amongst several fixed thickness categories, with the distribution evolving over time as a result of ice ridging during deformation and thermodynamic growth or melt. The thermodynamic component of the model includes a surface energy budget and heat conduction calculation for each thickness category and a fixed-depth mixed-layer beneath the ice that acts as a thermal reservoir under ice-free conditions. The report describes the theory and computer code along with a sample calculation.

Measurement of organically bound tritium in urine and feces

To improve the sensitivity and accuracy of the organically bound tritium (OBT) measurement in urine and feces samples, a bioassay method was developed where the OBT component is concentrated by repeated distillation and vacuum evaporation. Samples first undergo low-temperature distillation (LTD) and vacuum separation to isolate tritiated water (HTO) and exchangeable tritium. This is followed by converting the non-exchangeable tritium into HTO through oxygen combustion. The fractions can be independently measured, thus reducing some of the uncertainties encountered in the LTD method. This report measures the effect of cross-contamination or incomplete recoveries or conversion of one form of tritium to another during the analytical procedure.

Results of a study of the mechanism of uniform corrosion of copper under simulated nuclear fuel waste disposal conditions. The study performed simple exposure tests consisting of copper coupons exposed to buffer material and synthetic groundwater solutions to simulate disposal vault conditions. Transport processes were controlled by varying the density of the compacted buffer material. Two series of tests were carried out, one in the presence and the other in the absence of gamma-radiation. Each series included three different buffer densities and three different temperatures. Upon completion of each test, the coupon, the compacted buffer, and the solution were examined and analyzed. A weight-loss corrosion rate and a copper concentration profile were determined from each test.

more skilled, highly self-directed students were found to use far more metacognitive activity. When they were free to set difficulty levels in a series of math tasks, it was found they alternated between challenging and easy tasks. Findings suggest that encouraging students to make explicit and implicit probes on appropriate tasks will foster self-direction in task execution and problem solving. Authors recommend a greater emphasis on individuals achieving independent mastery, than on curriculum, grade level, or norms.

Welding zirconium produces residual stresses and local changes in microstructure and crystallographic texture. Any use of a welded component has to take these features into account because they affect properties and thus behaviour. Many nuclear components made from zirconium alloys, such as fuel and support structures, are welded and perform with few problems. This paper describes applications in the calandria tubes in the CANDU reactor that have given excellent service but must increase margins to improve their strength, and some pressure tubes that are welded and must be protected from delayed hydride cracking.

A Model for the release of low-volatility fission products in oxidizing conditions

Canadian Nuclear Society. Conference (12th : 1991 : Saskatoon, Sask.) By D.S. Cox ... et al. Chalk River, ON : Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Chalk River Laboratories, 1991. 17 p. : ill., Bibl. (AECL research / Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. ; AECL-10440 ISSN 0067-0367) Presented at the 12th annual Conference of the Canadian Nuclear Society.
MICROLOG 94-05506 (1 fiche)

A thermodynamic and kinetic model was developed for calculating low-volatility fission-product releases from UO<sub>2</sub> at high temperatures in oxidizing conditions. Volatilization of the UO<sub>2</sub> matrix is assumed to be the rate controlling process. Oxidation kinetics of the UO<sub>2</sub> are modelled by either interfacial rate control, gas phase oxidant transport control, or solid-state diffusion of oxygen. The vapour pressure of UO<sub>3</sub> in equilibrium with the oxidizing fuel is calculated from thermodynamic data, and volatilization rates are determined using a model for forced convective mass transport. Low-volatility fission-product releases are calculated from the volume of vaporized fuel. Model calculations are conservative compared to experimental data for zirconium, cesium, niobium, and lanthanum fission-product releases from irradiated UO<sub>2</sub> exposed to air at 1973-2350K. The implications of this conservatism are discussed for possible rate control by processes other than convective mass transport of SO<sub>3</sub>. Coefficients for effective surface area (based on experimental data) and for heterogeneous rate controlling reaction kinetics are introduced to facilitate agreement between calculations and the experimental data.

Modeling CANDU-type fuel behaviour during extended burnup irradiations using a revised version of the ELESIM code

By V.I. Arimescu and W.R. Richmond. Chalk River, ON : Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Chalk River Laboratories, 1992. 22 p. : ill., Bibl. (AECL research / Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. ; AECL-10622 ISSN 0067-0367) Presented at the IAEA Technical Committee Meeting on Fission Gas Release and Fuel Rod Chemistry Related to Extended Burnup.
MICROLOG 94-05461 (1 fiche)

The high-burnup database for CANDU fuel, with a variety of cases, offers a good opportunity to check models of fuel behaviour, and to identify areas for improvement. Good agreement of calculated values of fission-gas release and sheath hoop strain with experimental data indicates that the global behaviour of the fuel element is adequately simulated by a computer code. Using the ELESIM computer code, the fission-gas release, swelling, and fuel pellet expansion models were analyzed and changes made for gaseous swelling and diffusional release of fission-gas atoms to the grain boundaries.

Study of the effect of texture and dislocation structure on irradiation creep of Zircaloy-2 (irradiated at about 340 K) and Zr-2.5Nb alloys (irradiated at about 558 K) using a self-consistent model. The model relates the creep behaviour of polycrystals to that of single crystals by taking into account the crystallographic texture, dislocation density, grain shape, and intergranular stresses generated due to the crystallographic anisotropy. Three independent creep compliances of the polycrystal obtained from creep tests on a reference material are used to derive the single crystal creep compliances. These are used to calculate the polycrystalline compliances for the remaining materials.

CANDU reactors utilize large numbers of in-core, self-powered detectors for control and protection.

In the original design, the detectors (coaxial cables) were wound on carrier tubes and immersed in the heavy water moderator. Failures occurred due to corrosion and other factors and replacement was costly because the assemblies were not designed with maintenance in mind. This paper describes the evolution of this detector design and why a different design was chosen and installed in the Gentilly-2 reactor in Quebec and the Point Lepreau reactor in New Brunswick.

Water resources data can be used to detect changes in the climate, but only if long-term records exist in areas free from the influences of human activity. Northern Saskatchewan appeared to be an excellent location, as it has many pristine watersheds that could reflect global environmental changes through variations in the hydrologic regime, but most of it has a limited length of water record, usually under 30 years. Exploratory data analysis methods were used to evaluate 52 hydrometric stations in the Churchill River and Mackenzie River basins. Single station streamflow records were analyzed graphically and statistically for significant trends or patterns in the data.

Routing models for packet-switched networks have traditionally been based on the assumption that the offered traffic is Poisson. This is unrealistic since for many applications real life data streams tend to be extremely 'bursty', contradicting the Poisson assumption. This paper introduces a centralized bifurcated routing optimization model for networks that are significantly non-Poisson offered traffic. The model assesses the impact of non-Poisson traffic on routing algorithm developed for Poisson flow.

When Canada extended jurisdiction over fisheries in 1977 and created a 200-mile Exclusive Fishing Zone, three areas of the continental shelf remained largely beyond Canadian control: the northeastern portion of the Grand Bank, the southeastern portion, and the outcropping of the shelf east of the Bank. This brief document looks at overfishing in the Atlantic coast.

Corridors are convergence places of transactions and spatial accumulation in a buffer space between articulation points, the hub centres of multimodal transportation networks. The tendency for an articulation point is to develop transshipment functions while relocating production and processing functions along the corridor. In East and Southeast Asia, where regional economic cohesion is growing, they provide a tentativeness of territorial homogeneity over an heterogeneous landscape. This paper is an introduction to the structure and regulation of urbanization corridors in East and Southeast Asia.

Dans ce document, nous présentons les tendances qui se font déjà sentir en ce qui a trait aux deux plus importants paiements de transfert fédéraux aux provinces, soit le financement des programmes établis et la péréquation, et qui sont symptomatiques de l'orientation dans ce domaine. En faisant appel à des statistiques qui nous permettent de déterminer les grands courants de l'évolution en matière de paiements de transfert, nous nous intéressons essentiellement à l'avenir; nous n'abordons donc que brièvement les aspects historiques et techniques des transferts, dont traitent d'ailleurs d'autres publications du Service de recherche.

The PHEBUS Fission Product (FP) program is conducting a series of integrated, in-pile experiments to improve the understanding of the physical and chemical behaviour of FP, including their release from a degraded core and their transport and deposition in both the primary circuit and containment. Six tests are planned six tests to cover a representative range of phenomena expected to occur during postulated severe accidents. The first experiment (FPT0) will be conducted with a bundle of 20 trace-irradiated fuel rods, each with a burnup of 0.3 MWd/kgU, the second (FPT1) will be conducted at the same thermal-hydraulic conditions as FPT0 but with pre-irradiated fuel having a pre-transient burnup of 27.3 MWd/kgU. Both will be conducted in an oxidizing environment. FPT0 and FPT1 release calculations done to date have been done with versions of the CORSOR code. To provide an alternative estimate of FP releases for the two tests, a series of analyses were done using FREEDOM, a more fundamental microstructure-based code that is under development. This paper provides a brief description of the FREEDOM code and presents the results of both the PHEBUS and the ORNL FP release.

Used a multiple criteria assessment package for reading, writing, and mathematics programs for Grade 3 and for musical, kinesthetic, spatial, and personal development programs for Kindergarten and Grade 1. Combined assessment and evaluation by the classroom teacher, review teams of educators, learners guided by the teacher, and the system. Graded students as below, at, or above desired target achievement. Used assessment instruments relating to student self-assessment; evaluation of individual students by review team members external to the school; standardized testing; assessment of samples of student writing by teams of educators; and evaluation by the classroom teacher. Results in reading and writing indicate girls at the end of the primary division reach a significantly higher level of achievement than boys, while girls and boys are about equal in mathematics.

Des groupes de travail et des comités directeurs composés de cadres supérieurs du gouvernement ont repéré les problèmes dans la façon dont les marchés réglementés ont fonctionné et ont fait des propositions réfléchies pour régler les points ennuyeux. Cinq scénarios sont brièvement examinés dans ce document.

La Direction générale des services médicaux est confrontée au besoin urgent de donner suite aux revendications qui lui sont présentées pour qu'elle s'attaque aux graves problèmes de santé mentale qui vivent les collectivités des Premières nations et des Inuit. Elle a engagé un processus de consultation avec les Premières nations et avec les Inuit du Labrador dans le but d'élaborer un cadre de politique sur la santé mentale. Les consultations ont permis de recueillir des informations sur la nature des sources de préoccupation et des problèmes qui se posent dans les collectivités; elles ont débouché sur la proposition d'une orientation des mesures du gouvernement fédéral qui tiendrait compte des besoins de ceux qui vivent et travaillent au sein de ces collectivités. La propagande incitant à la haine et préconisant l'inégalité raciale a probablement toujours existé; toutefois, les trente dernières années ont été le témoin d'un débat généralisé sur ce qu'il convient de faire à ce sujet, si tant est qu'on y puisse quelque chose. Cette discussion met plus directement que jamais en conflit les valeurs sociales généralement acceptées au Canada que sont le multiculturalisme et l'égalitarisme, d'une part, et la liberté d'expression, d'autre part.

La troisième partie précise l'information sur chaque composante de la subvention et sur leur répartition entre les universités. Viennent ensuite, dans des parties distinctes, les règles relatives à la gestion des subventions, à la reddition des comptes, à la détermination du nombre de postes de résidents en médecine et celles relatives au contingentement des nouvelles inscriptions en médecine. Les résultats du calcul des subventions de chaque université, par composante détaillée, sont présentés dans les tableaux et annexes qui complètent le mémoire.

Used-fuel leaching under mildly reducing conditions (Ar-3% H<sub>2</sub> atmosphere) at 100C was studied using unoxidized fuel fragments and leaching solutions of distilled deionized water (DDH<sub>2</sub>O) and standard Canadian Shield saline solution (SCSSS, I=1.37). The use of strontium 90 concentrations as a measure of fuel matrix dissolution and the congruency of actinide dissolution are discussed for the origin (gap, grain boundaries or matrix) and the dissolution behaviour (solubility and dissolution kinetics) of radionuclides in solution. Frequency distribution of the carapace width of mature females were distinguished into several length groups composed of normal distribution with distinct modes, presumably corresponding with the plural moulting instars in mature females. Main spawning season was restricted and the gonad index showed customarily bimodal distribution suggesting a 2-year period for the reproductive cycle. Individual variations of 5 measurements in the reproductive characteristics were analyzed by means of principal component analysis. CA CF FI LS ND SC

To develop restoration guidelines for the New Brunswick peat industry, restoration plans were prepared for two bogs in northeastern N.B. with differing physical characteristics and different peat extraction histories. Pokesudie Bog is a maritime bog located on Chaleur Bay that has been in production since the 1960s. Eel River Bog, part of the Escuminac Bog complex, is relatively undeveloped. New survey and coring data were gathered to supplement that from the 1970s and bottom substrate topography maps, final peat surface topography maps, restoration sequence maps, and sequential plant community cover type maps were prepared at 5-10 year intervals. Elevation surveys, water chemistry sampling, and quantitative and qualitative vegetation sampling were conducted to characterize existing plant communities on disturbed and undisturbed bog, brackish marsh, and salt marsh. Mined peatland restoring naturally as salt marsh at Pokemouche Bog and Shippigan Bog were sampled to predict plant communities for saltwater inundated sections of Pokesudie Bog. Wildlife habitats surrounding the bogs were assessed to help develop a restoration plan that complements the landscape ecology of the region. Ecologically sensitive areas on and surrounding the bogs were identified.

As part of the effort to clean up contaminated sites in Canada under the national Contaminated Sites Remediation Program, whole organism bioassays were identified as a tool for assessing soil, freshwater sediment, and freshwater quality. This review conducted a comprehensive literature search on toxicological bioassays; identified potential tests for use in contamination assessment; evaluated test suitability; and selected batteries of tests for assessing water, sediment, and soil quality. Potential biological tests were identified through contact with agencies that develop standardized toxicity tests, with researchers involved in toxicity testing around the world, and through review of recent issues of journals publishing articles on toxicity testing and existing bioassay reviews.

Fundamental physical and chemical properties (such as particle size and chemical composition) were evaluated and the rheological properties of freshly mixed grouts, which control the workability of the grouts, were determined together with the properties of hardened materials, which largely control the long-term performance of the materials in repository settings. This report presents the results of these laboratory studies of the material properties. The laboratory tests were associated with and carried out in parallel to investigations of the in situ performance of the materials and the development of theoretical geochemical models for cement-grout longevity.

L'objectif de ce document-ci est d'actualiser cet outil de travail. Il s'agit donc de dresser un profil différentiel des immigrées qui résident au Québec en 1986. Identifiant les disparités socio-économiques vis-à-vis les Québécoises de naissance et les hommes immigrés. En plus de traiter de nouveaux domaines (técondité, situation familiale, monoparentalité) cette analyse examine aussi les politiques adoptées à l'égard des femmes dans le contexte de l'immigration et l'évolution de cette population au sein de la société québécoise.

This report outlines the different between deflagration and detonation and reviews the various flame acceleration mechanisms, along with the related research results. The current understanding of transition to detonation as a two-step process is described in detail. Occurrence of a local explosion in hot spots generated by the focussing of shock waves existing ahead of a fast flame, or in high-reactivity centres generated by turbulence-induced rapid mixing of flame and unburnt gas, and the resulting local quenching of the flame, are described. The current models for flame acceleration are listed and their limitations are identified. The available qualitative criteria for assessing the likelihood of transition to detonation under given conditions are briefly discussed. The feasibility of developing a quantitative methodology for assessing this likelihood is discussed, and further work required to complete this development is outlined.

These interactions were studied with the grouts in both their unset and hardened states to determine the mechanistic function of the superplasticizer, the phase of residence of the superplasticizer in hardened materials, and the permanence of superplasticizer in hardened grouts. Attempts were made to extract superplasticizer from unset pastes by mechanical processes. The superplasticizer was leached from the grouts when they were hardened. A microautoradiographic method was developed to investigate the phases of superplasticizer residence in hardened grouts and to confirm the inferences from the leaching studies.

Surficial bottom sediments were obtained at 96 of 103 stations sampled and were analyzed using a model TAIL Coulter Counter to determine their disaggregated inorganic grain size distributions. Total particle size and disaggregated inorganic grain size distributions were also determined by Coulter Counter for suspended sediment samples collected at 17 stations. Conductivity, temperature, and depth (CTD) profiles were obtained at 12 of these water column stations. Grain size, total suspended sediment concentration, and CTD data are tabled and plotted in this report.

Tables of beta-ray dose distributions in water

By W.G. Cross, P.Y. Wong and N.O. Freedman. Chalk River, ON : Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., Chalk River Laboratories, 1992. 107 p. : ill., Bibl. (AECL research / Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. ; AECL-10521 ISSN 0067-0367) MICROLOG 94-05507 (2 fiche)

This report presents tables calculated by the ACCEPT and other Monte Carlo codes for dose distributions in water produced by monoenergetic electrons and by 120 or more beta-ray and conversion-electron emitters in three geometrical arrangements. These include a point isotropic source in an infinite water medium; an isotropic source distributed uniformly over a circular area of either one sq cm or 100 sq cm on an air-water boundary; and a broad parallel beam incident normally on the surface of the water. A method of deriving distributions in other low-Z media from these tables is given. From the results, some deductions are made on the variation of  $H'(0.07)$ /fluence, for normal incidence, and on the backscatter factors of air and water as a function of maximum beta energy, for plain isotropic sources.

Bien que leur composition et leur fonctionnement soient remarquablement diversifiés, elles partagent toutes le même but : promouvoir les principes et les pratiques du développement durable grâce à une prise de décisions par consensus. Ce document est destiné à tous ceux qui s'intéressent à nos travaux et donne un bref aperçu de l'historique, de l'organisation et du rôle de certaines tables rondes du Canada.

Thermodynamic calculations are used to determine the chemical speciation of tellurium in the primary heat transport system under postulated reactor accident conditions. The speciation of tellurium is determined for various values of the temperature, oxygen partial pressure, tellurium concentration, and Cs/Te ratio. The effects of the Zircaloy cladding and/or cesium on tellurium speciation and volatility are of particular interest.

Thick target neutron yields from spallation reactions

For very high power accelerator-based transmutation systems, thermodynamic considerations dictate targets of 50-100 cm diameter and 125-250 cm length. The spallation neutron yields calculated for these larger size targets are about 50-55 neutrons per proton of energy 1.6 GeV, which would appear to be counter to the experimental value of 35 neutrons per proton extrapolated from the Cosmotron data, or even the theoretical value of 40 n/p for the 20 cm diameter target used in the experiments. This paper examines the two possible causes for this discrepancy: proton beam leakage from Cosmotron targets or neutron multiplication.

Comme il était prévisible, on a assisté à des renversements de position importants de la part des gouvernements provinciaux qui s'étaient déjà engagés dans la voie de l'harmonisation des deux taxes. Dans ce climat, les provinces aujourd'hui rebelles continueront, pendant encore une bonne période, à s'opposer avec vigueur à l'harmonisation.

Versions of the model were developed for designs with a closed riser duct and an open riser duct above the core. Summary of the Room 209 excavation response test conducted during the construction of the 240 level of the Underground Research Laboratory (URL) to study excavation response. The test determined the hydraulic and mechanical response to excavation of a rock mass containing a narrow zone of water-bearing fractures; estimated the mechanical and hydraulic properties of the rock mass on a large scale; assessed the ability to model the hydraulic and mechanical response of the rock mass, and through back-analyses improved the understanding of the mechanisms controlling responses and improved modelling capabilities; and conducted comparative tests on extensometers for use in future URL experiments. The test also provided the opportunity to assess and improve the equipment, procedures, and methods. Test phases included instrumenting and characterizing the test area; modelling the expected responses of the installed instruments; excavating the test length of Room 209 and measuring the responses; comparing the model estimates to the measured responses, and back-calculating the large-scale properties of the rock mass; and developing and testing a method for quantitatively measuring the excavation-induced connected permeability in the rock mass parallel to the axis of the tunnel. This report presents the objectives and scope of each test phase, as well as the results and conclusions.

Information on water bird and shorebird numbers is scarce for Cuba. This paper records water birds and shorebirds encountered in wetlands and coastal areas of Cuba. Birds were counted in the province of Matanzas from 14-21 February 1990 from a vehicle or while walking. Bird numbers that were recorded as a range were averaged and the rounded-off number was then taken as the count value. The lowest count per species was used for counts at Salinas de Bidos on 17 February. As much of the shoreline as possible between Havana and Varadero was viewed from the vehicle, and about 11 km of the Peninsula de Hicacos were surveyed, including observations made at Laguna Mangon and Laguna Mangoncito, both situated near the tip of peninsula.

Demonstration of the application of the Water Use Analysis model (WUAM) on the Saskatchewan portion of the South Saskatchewan River basin focusing on data requirements and preparation, scenario development, and model runs, and on the analysis of the results. The study investigated the water resources impacts of four alternative development scenarios. The scenarios, all assumed to correspond to the year 2000, covered two levels of future water use in Alberta and two levels of irrigation development in Saskatchewan. Only the irrigated area in Saskatchewan was varied; all other irrigation parameters were assumed to remain constant. The system was also simulated under the extreme condition of Alberta's using 50% of the monthly natural streamflow. Irrigation water uses by irrigation area, node, and basin total and consumptive uses from Lake Diefenbaker for irrigation, evaporation, and diversion were analyzed for the various scenarios and their frequencies of occurrence were presented.

Although a great deal of attention has been directed to the issue of women's status in Canada, women continue to face conditions that set them apart from men in our society. For example, Canadian women on average continue to earn less than men. This is reflected in the greater risk of poverty for women than for men, which is often linked to the inability of some women to leave violent living situations. This document looks at those issues.

For many young individuals (those aged 15-24), the transition from school to work means entering the labour market relatively unskilled, inexperienced, unfamiliar with job search and unaware of the job opportunities open to them. Consequently, many of them face the possibility of unemployment during their initial years as members of the labour force. Despite the relatively high level of public attention given to the issue of unemployment, this attention seldom addresses the various types of unemployment and their underlying causes. This paper attempts to do this with respect to present-day youth unemployment.
